"We are pleased to recognize the accomplishments of this esteemed group of leaders within SYNNEX," said Peter Larocque, President, North American Technology Solutions, SYNNEX Corporation. "In addition to their continued hard work, they each have a passion for helping our organization, as well as our partners and the greater IT channel, succeed."

The Power 100 honorees belong to an exclusive group that includes women leaders who are key drivers of their companies' success and who continue to help move the entire IT channel forward. The SYNNEX honoree for 2018 is:

- Reyna Thompson, Vice President, Product Management, CONVERGESo/vSecure Networking Group– Thompson continues to lead the rapid expansion of SYNNEX' line card around networking and security. She has also led the integration of Westcon-Comstor Americas' Security, Networking and Unified Communications business into SYNNEX and now oversees the product management, business development, renewals/maintenance, and engineering teams for this newly combined business unit. She continues to focus on accelerating digital transformation and quickly bringing technology innovation to market as a monetized business for the channel.

In the US, SYNNEX Women of the Channel honorees include:

- April Petty, Vice President, Sales – Petty plays a key role in educating customers about SYNNEX and its value-added programs. Her leadership helps SYNNEX develop deep customer relationships while reaching new customers to result in increased sales. Petty and her team continue to develop strategic events focused around vertical segments and solutions, allowing partners to walk away with leading offerings to extend to their customer base.
- Sandi Stambaugh, Vice President, Product Management – Stambaugh leads SYNNEX' VISUALSo/v and Device Mobility business through a solutions-centered approach to customer enablement and technology advancement. Stambaugh takes a strategic approach by aligning with key industry associations to expand training and support offerings in vertical markets such as K-12 education, public safety, retail and hospitality. Over the past year, she has led SYNNEX' VISUALSo/v business in above-market growth and has helped launch several new strategic vendor partners.
- Willa Flemate, Vice President, Sales – Flemate is recognized for managing a team that creates custom solutions that are mutually beneficial to SYNNEX suppliers and integrators in a transforming market. Recently, she has developed a team of vertically-focused experts for the system integrator and OEM community and has partnered with vendors to offer programs to support key market segments. Her leadership has resulted in significant sales growth and continued partner success.
- Heather Allen, Senior Director, Security Product Sales and Marketing – Allen continues to help drive channel growth for leading security and unified communications partners. Last year, Allen was promoted with marketing responsibilities in both the US and Canada. Allen has helped partners achieve financial revenue targets; developed and executed programs to drive new business; recruited and onboarded new partners through sales and technical enablement programs; and built channel testimonials for increased brand recognition for partners.
- Molly Sherwood, Director, Business Development – Sherwood is responsible for leading marketing and business development teams to help customers grow their businesses. Over the past year, she led a marketing team to integrate a new automated CRM system to enable pipeline management. Sherwood also launched a new customer preference center and helped develop the Comstor EDGE strategy with architecture-specific programs that enable partners to grow their business practice areas of security, networking, collaboration, data center, software and annuities.
- Sharon March, Senior Manager, Technical Operations – March plays a key role in understanding certifications and specializations to help partners choose the right path for their businesses. Through her dedication to SYNNEX and the channel, March helps partners improve their status with key vendors, become eligible for rebates and programs, and grow their overall business. With her team, she also helps deliver vendor-specific training offerings to partners and is on track to support more than 50 resellers in this capacity.

In Canada, the following leaders are recognized:

- Suzanne Barrette, Vice President, Sales – Barrette has worked closely with partners in the Canadian market to help them identify strategic growth opportunities and create customized training programs for their sales teams. Barrette also works closely with SYNnex product management and sales teams to help grow overall business and maintain a top position in key product segments. Her strong partner relationships help give SYNnex an advantage to introduce new product categories and share innovative new ideas with customers.
- Siobhan Byron, Vice President and General Manager – Byron is an expert in designing and launching strategies and frameworks to capture new revenue opportunities, expand into new channels, and catapult sales performance in the Canadian market. Most recently, she has worked to expand SYNnex' channel business through strategic cross-sell initiatives. She has also added key security, unified communications and collaboration offerings, as well as solutions complete with training and enablement sessions to support channel partners in developing their businesses.

"This accomplished group of leaders is steadily guiding the IT channel into a prosperous new era of services-led business models and deep, strategic partnerships," said Bob Skelley, CEO of The Channel Company. "CRN's 2018 Women of the Channel list honors executives who are driving channel progress through a number of achievements – exemplary partner programs, innovative product development and marketing, effective team-building, visionary leadership and accelerated sales growth – as well as advocacy for the next generation of women channel executives."
